'Macbeth' Imaginative, Technically Good

By DAVE ROYKIV
Kaimin Drama Reviewer

An imaginative production in which technical excellence prevailed in spite of a few superfluous innovations was delivered last night when the Maqueurs presented William Shakespeare's shortest and grimmest tragedy, "Macbeth."

Under the direction of Douglas Bankson, associate professor of drama, and under the technical direction of Richard James, assistant professor of drama, the players and production crew provided the theater audience with an exciting and genuinely stimulating experience. Parts were taken well in hand by almost all the actors, and the play proceeded from beginning to end without a major flaw.

Jim Baker, cast in the lead role as Macbeth, did an exceptional job. He moved forcefully across the stage articulating his lines with admirable restraint. His clear, loud delivery gave impact to lines that can easily be muddled by inordinate volume.

Georgia Tree, Lady Macbeth, has demonstrated considerable dramatic skill in the part and again excelled. She was properly eclipsed by Baker, resisting (with some help from the director, one would imagine) the temptation to over-emphasize the darkly inspired words of this sexless woman. Cast once again in a role pre-eminently in the neuter gender, Miss Tree distilled to an essence the stark will she in part symbolized.

But she did not go so far as to lend credence to the hackneyed image of a domineering woman driving her man to a damnation that reviles him. Macbeth is revolted by the denouement of his marriage to chaos, but the damnation is one that is inevitably of his own making and is the only noble culmination to a life which he finds, without reservation, meaningless.

Duncan Crump, too, took advantage of his role and seemed, with some lapses, to live the part of a man of integrity caught in the ever-spreading web of disorder and horror that precedes from the compulsive Macbeth's will to power.

Austin Gray as Duncan portrayed the authority and dignity of a king perhaps at times too well. That is, there is in some cases only a subtle line between dignity and pomposity. A more sensitive portrayal of character was provided by Glenn Gauer, cast as Banquo. He spoke clearly and with less self-consciousness, it seemed, than Bill Dobson, who played Malcolm.

Music for the production was composed by Jerry Mader, who first provided audiences with his unique and weird cacophony in last year's production of "Blood Wedding." The music was applicable particularly in the opening scene of "Macbeth" but later in the play at times was disturbingly out of place. One wanted to hear the lines, but the music, which has its particular, grotesque charm, diverted the attention.

The costumes also were distracting in some ways. The symbolism supposedly inherent in the modern designs that decorated the dress of the players seemed finally cheap and completely unnecessary. No modernization, no accentuation of symbolism is likely to improve upon Shakespeare's innate sensibility in providing his (and our) audiences with enough and no more.

The motivation of Macbeth's ultimately insane posture usually is summed up in one word—ambition. But ambition, as Macbeth himself recognizes (as early as Act I, Sc. vii), really is not adequate in explaining his actions. He knows fully well the situation he is getting himself into. He is aware, too, that no good can ever come of it. He chooses evil, finally, in defiance even of himself, lets pure will carry him to his death. His will is tempered neither by reason nor by moral commitment. He dies without hope, without illumination, and, consequently, without grace. We do not care, in the end, except to recognize in his last figure the remnant of a man who may have been any of us.

He dies the prey of his own will; hence, he is the agent of his own destruction, not the tool of his passionate wife. Such must be the case if the play is to have any tragical import at all. Macbeth can be neither tool (except of his own will) nor shallow hypocrite.

It would be foolish to conclude, however, that the play posits a nihilistic point of view of its author. Macbeth dies in the grips of ni-hilism and is the universe of this play. He is not the total Elizabethan cosmos. His actions are not wholly comprehensive to himself nor to us, and therein lies the real tragedy of his life, the reality that is hard to face in the modern age.

The play continues through Sunday night. Curtain time is 8:15.

Governor's Proposal Dumped

Science Complex Approval Threatened by Legislature

By JIM CRANE
Kaimin Managing Editor
Chances for approval of Pres. Robert Johns' plan to begin construction on the first phase of a science building complex are doubtful. The Democrat-controlled state legislature has dumped Republican

Gov. Tim Babcock's $17.2 million building plan along with his proposal to finance the building plan with revenue from a 3-cent-a-pack cigarette tax presently used for Korean War veterans' bonuses. The Democrats have come up with a counterproposal for a $10 million building plan financed through a 5 per cent diversion of state income tax funds. The plan cuts 40 per cent from the governor's original proposal.

Robert Pantzer, MSU financial vice president, commented in a Kaimin interview yesterday, "We're really apprehensive" about the future of the $2,560,000 science complex requested in the governor's original proposal.

"With the budget cut, we don't know what will be left out," Mr. Pantzer said. Three other University building proposals had higher priority in the Governor's budget, so it seems likely that the science complex plan will be the first of the University's capital improvement to be cut, he continued.

The three items having higher priority are a $250,000 addition to the heating plant, a $200,000 physical plant and shop building and $100,000 for general repair and improvement.

"Everyone agrees that the need is here for a state building program," Mr. Pantzer said. "The problem is the amount of money and how to get it."

Mr. Pantzer said the administration thinks the Governor's plan to finance the state building program through cigarette tax money "has considerable merit."

"It seems to us that the scheme to use this for building is a good idea," he said, adding that legal facts complicate the problem.

The tax was initiated by public referendum for benefit of veterans and the legality of using the money for another purpose must be considered, he said.

Love in a Big Way

By PAT ROSE
Kaimin News Editor

Jane's heart is as big as all outdoors—in fact, that's where she has to keep it.

For most people, sending a valentine is the simplest thing in the world. Five cents will get one anywhere in the United States.

But Dennis Calkin, photographer for the Billings Gazette, had other ideas.

A two-ton truck arrived at Knowles Hall yesterday with an eight-foot valentine for Jane Totman, Kaimin associate editor, from Billings.

The 50-pound red plywood heart, fringed with lace, announcements, in large white letters, Calkin's affections: "To Jane—I love you—Denny."

Calkin claims it's the "world's largest valentine," and Miss Totman says, "It's a newspaperman's idea of a joke. When he does something, he does it big."

Calkin alerted the Kaimin of his plan and also George Remington, bureau chief of the United Press International in Helena and a UPI photographer in Missoula.

And what will Miss Totman do with the valentine? "I don't know," she said. "I just don't know."

Venture to Become Garret Pending Central Board Okay

The Garret will be the new name for the campus literary and creative arts magazine formerly known as Venture, pending approval by Central Board next week.

Two proposals, one to drop the name Venture and another to name the magazine The Garret, were tabled Wednesday night by CB in accordance with the policy involving bylaw changes.

The Venture staff decided that a name change would facilitate copyrighting procedures and would also help to create a new image of the magazine. Kitty Wright, editor of the magazine, said the name change was necessary because there have been changes in the fundamental purposes of the magazine.

Miss Wright said the staff wishes to copyright the contents of the magazine. Since there are two magazines which already are named Venture, a name change would be necessary.

The staff also thinks that the name Venture has a poor image because of problems of the magazine in recent years.

Three thousand copies of the magazine will be printed, Miss Wright said, and money has been allocated for printing extra copies if necessary. The first Garret is to be 64 pages, longer than any former magazine.

The staff reports that manuscripts have been coming in slowly and is encouraging students, particularly those outside the field of English, to submit manuscripts, poetry, art, plays and photographs.

Students are reminded that all manuscripts should be submitted to the English office before March 17. And a photograph of entries should reach art editor Ken Berry by April 2. Berry can be reached at 549-7834.

Faculty Telegram Asks U.S. to Halt Viet Nam Attacks

The following telegram was sent to Pres. Johnson yesterday by the undersigned members of the faculty and their wives.

"We urge you to immediately stop the United States attacks on North Viet Nam and to take the problems of Southeast Asia to the International Conference Table as suggested by several senators. Further escalation of this already unpopular war can only result in more American deaths in a struggle not necessary for, and perhaps detrimental to, American security."

The telegram was signed by Cynthia A. Schuster, associate professor of philosophy, J. F. Lawry, assistant professor of philosophy, Joseph Kramer, professor emeritus, Edwin R. Bingham, professor of history, Arnold J. Silverman, assistant professor of geology, John Hower, associate professor of geology, the Rev. William J. Kilber, Methodist campus pastor, E. W. Pfeiffer, associate professor of zoology.

Hubert I. Beatty, visiting assistant professor of history, Allan H. Kittell, associate professor of history, Benjamin G. Rader, assistant professor of history, J. E. Van de Wetering, assistant professor of history, Maxine Van de Wetering, Roger Dunsmore, instructor of English, Betty Dunsmore, Michael Kreiberg, graduate assistant in English, Dexter M. Roberts, instructor of English, Rodney A. Mead, graduate assistant in zoology and Heidi Mead.

HEART OF MY HEART—Jane Totman, journalism senior from Billings, peeks through the 50-pound valentine sent her by Dennis Calkin, Billings Gazette photographer. The eight-foot tall heart is supported by Pat Rose, journalism senior from Polson, and Jean Lyon, sophomore psychology major from Kalispell. "It's a newspaperman's idea of a joke," Miss Totman says.

Partisanship by Democrats Upsets University's 10-Year Plan

Pres. Johns' 10-year building plan for MSU (and several somewhat less ambitious plans at other units of the University system) already has hit a snag although it has been off the architect's drawing board only a few months.

A large part of the blame for this failure can be placed on the Democrats in the legislature who have rejected what appeared to be a reasonable and farsighted program advanced by Republican Gov. Tim Babcock.

House Democrats yesterday dumped Gov. Babcock's $17.2 million program in favor of their own $10 million plan. The key to the defeat was the party-line rejection of Babcock's plan to finance part of the building program with a three-cent tax on cigarettes. The tax would have produced an estimated $2.4 million a year.

The university portion of the proposed $17.2 million building program was $9.3 million. If the same ratio is maintained, the actual amount available for university construction will be about $5.4 million for the next biennium, a loss of almost $4 million.

This may mean that MSU will not be able to build a $2.5 million science complex in the next two years. Many other units of the system will be in a similar position.

The budget proposed by the Democrats will be financed by a diversion of five per cent of the state income tax from the general fund.

We're not particular about whether the source of revenue is an earmarked income as proposed by Babcock or from the general fund as proposed by the Democrats. The important thing is that the money be made available to do the necessary building. It will not be under the $10 million program.

One of the reasons expressed for the cut-back was a doubt of the necessity for a crash program. This is surprising in view of the fact that both the Math and Geology buildings at MSU have been condemned for many years, the heating system is almost inadequate for the present buildings and several of the schools have libraries which are or soon will be inadequate for their student bodies.

The real reason for the Democratic defeat of Babcock's budget proposals appears to be purely political. They are opposed merely because the plans were presented by the Republican governor. This factor was evident several weeks ago when the Democrats condemned Babcock's proposal to charge a $5 service fee on all income tax forms. No sooner had several Democrats condemned the "head tax" than the party turned around and suggested a somewhat similar $2 charge for making refunds on income tax returns.

Gov. Babcock's building program met many of the genuine needs of Montana. The Democrats cut the heart from his program by rejecting the cigarette tax, but failed to find an adequate replacement for the revenue.

We would have hoped that when the majority party rejected the governor's plan, it would have come up with an adequate one itself.

History Professor Lauds Cultural Value Of University's New FM Radio Station

To the Kaimin:

I've been on campus for about 20 years, and I've seen "cultural" opportunities come and go. We've usually had a good music school, a good art department, and a good drama department, a pretty good Kaimin and a lecture series that has had its ups and downs. I lamented the disappearance of the ballet program and the stables (yes, I regard horsemanship, particularly dressage, as a high form of art!), but there has now occurred a development that is the best NEW thing to his the campus in my time.

I refer, of course, to KUFM. A must for every student, faculty member and Missoula resident is now an FM radio. Kudos to Dean Blumberg, Prof. Hess, the University administration and the J-school staff. The other night I heard a special on Churchill as an orator; it was the best such program I've heard on any Missoula radio station.

Dr. Schweitzer's 90 Years To be Honored by Concert

A concert of Bach music in honor of Albert Schweitzer will be performed by the MSU School of Fine Arts in the Music Recital Hall Sunday at 8:15 p.m.

Dr. Schweitzer is celebrating his 90th birthday this year. His careers have included that of theologian-philosopher, medical missionary and musician.

The concert is a tribute to Dr. Schweitzer. His study of Bach's music resulted in a two-volume work first published in 1905 which vividly showed Bach's genius in musical picturization and drama. Dr. Schweitzer, in younger years, was a recognized concert organist who toured Europe.

J. F. Logan, assistant professor of philosophy, will speak of "Albert Schweitzer: A Personal View" during the program.

Bach selections will include "Concerto for Piano and String Orchestra" directed by Eugene Andrie, professor of music, with Patricia Brunken as soloist and the "C Major Suite" for solo cello, with Florence Reynolds, associate professor of music.

The Passacaglia and Fugue will be directed by Laurence Perry, assistant professor of music and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden," will be performed by the University Choir and String Orchestra, conducted by Donald Carey, visiting instructor of music.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

Cubs to Hit Comeback Trail On Wyoming Court Tonight

Montana's Cubs tangle with Northwest Community College tonight and tomorrow night in Powell, Wyo. The clubs met in Missoula last month and split a two-game set.

The frosh will attempt to bounce back from a 75-71 defeat by the Montana State Bobkittens last week.

Coach Joe McDonald said he would start Gordie Zillges, Norm Clark, Greg Hanson, Dave Carpenter and Lee Levknecht.

Tim Pfahler, the Cubs' leading scorer, is hampered with a toe injury again, but the 6-3 forward will make the trip. McDonald said Pfahler's status would be determined at game time.

"We'll be going to Powell to win two," McDonald said yesterday. "We hope to surprise them with a few changes in our offense. Even if Pfahler is hurt, we should still be tough."

Pfahler paces the club in scoring with an 18.2 average. Hanson is hitting 17.9 a game and Clark 15.9. Zillges has a 10.3 scoring average, while Carpenter and Levknecht have 9.9 and 7.6 marks.

Skiers to Test Nation's Best At Idaho Meet

The Grizzly ski team will be up against some impressive competition in the Idaho Invitational Ski Meet at McCall, Idaho, tomorrow and Sunday. Teams from Idaho, Utah, Washington and Montana have entered.

Some of the best individual skiers in the nation will participate. Frithjof Prydz, 1964 NCAA jumping champion from Utah, will compete against his brother Rolf of Idaho, who was NCAA runner-up. MSC's Bill Barrier, Big Sky champ in the downhill and slalom in 1964, and Nils Jebesen, Idaho's cross country winner, have also entered the meet.

Sigma Chi Wins Men's Ski Meet

Sigma Chi won the men's intramural ski meet last weekend with a team time of 1:46.1. Giant slalom was the only event. Sigma Nu was second in 1:47.9, and Sigma Phi Epsilon third with 2:03.7.

Bill Cardon (SN) captured individual honors with 45.2. Dick Hughes led the winning Sigma Chi team with 46.1. Teammates Mike Potter and Jerry O'Neill finished in 46.2 and 48.8.

Upset-Minded Grizzlies to Face Weber Tonight, ISU Tomorrow

Montana's rapidly improving Grizzlies will try to play giant killer again tonight when they face the revenge-minded Weber State Wildcats in Ogden, Utah. Tomorrow MSU moves to Pocatello to clash with Idaho State.

Weber, tied with Gonzaga for first place in the Big Sky Conference, has won 17 of 19 games, including three of four league contests. Montana stunned the Wildcats 75-74 in Missoula last month.

"This road trip is quite an assignment," Grizzly coach Ron Nord said. "Weber is really going to be fired-up for us, and Idaho State is a tall, good ball club. But we've had some of our best workouts in three years this week—we'll be ready."

Montana's spoiler role against Weber can continue twofold tonight. A Grizzly win would not only jolt WSU's title hopes, but would thwart a Wildcat attempt to set a new home court winning streak of 17.

Nord said his team has been bothered by the virus bug this week. Hardest hit were Gary Meggellin and Wade Hughes. If Meggellin and Hughes are healthy, they'll start along with Ed Samelton, Tom Schilke and Bill Rice or John Quist, Nord reported.

Weber is expected to start Jerry Trice, Greg Harrop, Gene Visscher, John Silbernagel and Bob Belka, all scoring in double figures.

Trice and Visscher are averaging 18.3 and 18.6 a game to pace the Wildcat attack. Silbernagel is scoring 13.5 a game, while Harrop and Belka have 11.3 and 10.3 averages.

Nord's athletes will counter with an offense led by Samelton, Meggellin and Hughes. Samelton is hitting 18.3 points a game, Hughes 11 and Meggellin 10.9.

The tussle with Idaho State is a "must" for the Silvertips if they hope to avoid a last-place finish. MSU, 9-11 overall, is 2-5 in BSAC play, while ISU, 4-15 on the season, has a 1-2 league record. Captain Rich Dixon is back in the ISU lineup after injuries forced him to miss the first MSU-ISU game. He'll be joined in the lineup by Dave Wagoner (14.1), DeWayne Cruse (12.7), Robbie Knudson (10.8) and Ken Briggs (12.1). Maynard Sager (2.4) is the top reserve.

U Wrestlers, Swim Team Vie at Weber

Montana's wrestling and swimming teams join the basketball squad this weekend in action against Weber and Idaho State.

Coach Rainer Martens said he expects both wrestling meets to be "real tough" but added, "If we wrestle our best, we'll win."

Rod Lung (177) puts his flawless conference record on the line at Weber today and Idaho State tomorrow. Lung is undefeated in Big Sky action, while the team has a 3-3-1 dual-meet record.

Swimming coach Fred Stetson said he regards both Weber and Idaho State as good teams with fine personnel depth.

Much of the swimming team's performance hinges on Ed Maguire, who has been a consistent winner for MSU in freestyle events. The swimmers are 2-2.

No Comment From White House After Third U.S. Viet Nam Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States struck back yesterday at what it called murderous aggressions and outrages by the Vietnamese Communists and then clamped silence on future plans.

A White House statement said this government maintains its desire to "avoid spreading the conflict" but felt compelled to attack military targets in North Viet Nam in response to "further direct provocation" by the Hanoi Red regime.

The statement announcing the third reprisal air strike of this week cited the Viet Cong terrorist bombing in which Americans were killed in their billet as well as "assassinations and ambushes involving South Vietnamese civil and military officials."

Reports from Saigon said about 150 U.S. warplanes, striking from land and sea, smashed at targets in North Viet Nam. Four carrier-based U.S. Navy planes and one pilot were lost.

The White House described the targets as military facilities used for the training and infiltration of Viet Cong personnel into South Viet Nam.

Press secretary George E. Reedy said Pres. Johnson ordered the air strikes after an emergency meeting with the National Security Council on Wednesday afternoon.

The President went to bed around midnight, Reedy said, but was up several times during the night checking on latest developments in the situation.

Reedy said Johnson awoke at 3:30 a.m. and telephoned the "situation room," a command post in the White House basement, asking for the latest reports. Three more times during the night the President checked with the command post, Reedy said.

Questions about whether any further retaliatory action was planned were met with firm silence at both the White House and the Pentagon.

"I would have no comment on that," Reedy said.

A Pentagon spokesman added that, "Obviously, if we are, we shouldn't be tipping our hand—and we won't be."

Reedy said in response to another question that this country's allies "have been appropriately and promptly informed" about U.S. moves in Southeast Asia.

Fourteen MSU Students Claim Residence Status

MISSOULA (AP) — Fourteen more Montana State University students who enrolled initially as non-residents asked court help Thursday in their claim they have acquired resident status in Montana by attending school in the state.

They seek the return of registration fees, or tuition, over that paid by Montana residents. Non-resident tuition is higher by about $120 a quarter.
